K-5 Math Intervention

Math For Love ~ Dan Finkel

September 27, 2018

Join us for a day to develop an intervention program that builds both number sense and develops a positive disposition in mathematics.

“We created Math For Love to combine Play and Rigor, we play and learn the big ideas! Our target is the student who falls through the cracks: kids behind grade level. English-language learners, and possibly those who have started to associate school and especially math—as a place they want nothing to do with. Our goal was to craft an experience for them that would be:

- Positive, and get them excited to come to school,
- Productive, helping them step up toward, to, or beyond grade level,
- Playful, to help them bring their autonomy and creativity to mathematics, and truly own the subject.”

Build a Math Intervention Program that would include:

- Openers
- Activities
- Games
- Lessons
- Explorations
- Assessments

Math For Love has been used as a summer and intervention program in many districts. Learn how you can adapt this program to serve the students in your district!
